NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 11.—The Philadelphia club of the American League is the new world's baseball champion.

By a score of 3 to 1, the brilliant playing Athletics defeated New York today in the final game of the greatest diamond series ever staged, administering to the Giants an emphatic defeat in the closing contest but in the series. The Athletics have won four games to one for McGraw's men.

Christy Mathewson, wisest of pitchers, and Eddie Plank, Connie Mack's great southpaw, were pitted against each other today, and the Athletics outpitched the Giant.

By winning today's game and the world's series, the Athletics set a new record in baseball, giving to the American League its fourth consecutive world's championship, a new record for either league. The Athletics won in 1910 and 1911, the Boston Americans in 1912 and Athletics again in 1913.

Each player in the world's series makes a small fortune. The total amount to be divided among the players of the two teams is $135,163, of which each member of the Athletics will get $3,244 and each member of the Giants $2,162. The games in New York have drawn immense crowds. Bad weather has kept down the attendance in Philadelphia.

The pitching of the veteran Plank today made him the hero of the series, even in view of the wonderful batting and fielding of other members of the team or the great all-around work of Catcher Schang.

Plank's mull of an easy pop fly when a sure double play was in sight allowed New York to make the only run for the Giants. After the game a crowd of Philadelphia enthusiasts rushed out on the field, picked Plank up bodily, and carried him off the field on their shoulders.

Several other members of the victorious team were carried off in triumph. The scene at the Polo grounds was a remarkable one when the game was over.

Experts agree that the superior hitting of the Athletics and better fielding won the series. They hold that the pitchers of the two teams generally showed equal form, but that the Athletics far exceeded expectations in their hitting power, securing safeties even off the best pitching the Giants could produce.

The brilliance of the Philadelphia infield was shown today when Collins, Barry and McInnis twice performed marvellous double plays, knocking down seemingly safe hits and converting them into outs.

No extra-base hits were made today. Each pitcher got one strikeout.

[Note.—It was first reported by cable this morning that Bender pitched for Philadelphia, but later reports give Plank as the pitcher.]

MAINLANDER CHOICE FOR FEDERAL JOB

Jefferson McCann of Nashville, Tenn., Selected by Wilson and McReynolds for Hawaii U. S. Attorney

(Special Star-Bulletin Cable)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 11.—Jefferson McCann, an attorney of Nashville, Tennessee, has been chosen for U. S. district attorney for Hawaii by President Wilson and Attorney-general McReynolds.

WILSON'S CHOICE IS VETERAN ATTORNEY IN COURTS OF TENNESSEE

So far as could be learned this morning, no one in Honolulu knows who Jefferson McCann is, or how he has come to be the administration's choice for U. S. district attorney in Hawaii.

Senator James F. Coke, who has been the leading candidate for the office, was told of the president's choice by the Star-Bulletin this morning. Senator Coke said he had not heard of Mr. McCann before and none of the local Democrats seem to have known that he was even considered for the position.

The Nashville directory conveys the information that Jefferson D. McCann is attorney-general for the criminal branch of the county, with headquarters at Nashville. His title is given as "district attorney-general." Whether the position is elective or appointive is not definitely stated, though many of the court officials in Tennessee are elected. McCann is a

E. E. BATTELLE WILL LAUNCH CORPORATION

Plans To Dispose of $300,000 Worth of Stock in Shares Valued at $1 Each

GIFFARD AND ROTH ARE DIRECTING ORGANIZATION

New Process It Is Believed Will Revolutionize Sugar Industry and Reduce Cost

After years of close study and exhaustive experiments, at last to come forward with a process for the production of white sugar direct from cane juice without the expensive bone-char refining methods, after having his process elaborately discussed in leading sugar journals of the country, and after the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association, under whose directions the experiments were conducted on the Ewa plantation, has given the process its vigorous endorsement, E. E. Battelle, a chemist formerly with the Wailuku plantation, will launch a corporation within a few days, which is taken to mean a revolutionization of the cane sugar industry, here and elsewhere, and eventually the elimination of the refiner in connection with it.

Giffard & Roth, brokers, are directing the incorporation of the company, which is to be capitalized at $300,000 with shares at one dollar each.

Following the experiments conducted by the Hawaiian Sugar Experiment Station, the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association secured the rights for the process in these islands, but the question of adopting it is left with the individual plantations, which will be obliged, if the process is taken up, to pay a royalty to the corporation.

Importance of Process.
Figures to show the vast advantages which the use of the Battelle process will give a plantation over the methods now in use have been prepared as a rule taken from the figures of Noel Deerr or Dr. R. S. Norris, both of whom made experiments of the process for the station, and give some idea of the importance of the process.

Some uncertainty exists as to the liner Volturno. According to the latest shipping guide available, the Volturno is a steamer of the Canadian Northern Royal line, of 2,222 tons, and sailed from New York for Rotterdam on September 11, and would thus be on her return trip to New York, at 10:14 the cable dispatches. On the other hand, a vessel of this small size would hardly be carrying 700 passengers, and local shipping men this morning expressed the belief that the vessel meant is the Volturno of the French line, or Compagnie Generale Transatlantique. The photograph above on the left is therefore believed to be correct, but this is not entirely certain. Recent schedules of New York sailing and arrival dates do not mention the Volturno. Evidently she is in the immigrant-carrying trade.

WILL MILES RESCUES TOTS FROM DEATH IN RUNAWAY

Secretary to the Mayor Saves Lives of Grandchildren of W. C. Achi by Heroically Jumping Into Vehicle Drawn by Badly Frightened and Speedy Animal

A hero has been found in the mu-afternoon and was seen by Miles as he left his building. A modest hero he was driving his automobile to his home, for he refused to give an account of his lunch. He was going of his brave act, which no doubt slowly out King street and had saved the lives of two infants who had reached the Kamehameha School for died together in a carriage behind a horse, when the shouting of men wild runaway horse. Will Miles, reached his ears, and over all he secretary to the mayor, the young could distinguish the wild beating of man who has been raised to the a horse's hoofs on the street.

On turning he saw the approaching runaway. It had turned off the Asylum road and was coming at a terrific speed toward him. Quickly leaving the machine at the side of the road, he took a stand directly in front of the course of the animal. Men, women and children were running out into the street, the men making unsuccessful efforts to stop the horse, the women waving hysterically, all of which made the fright of the horse greater and its speed more swift.

Rescues Tots from Death.

The horse bore straight down upon him. He did not know at first that in the carriage two little children were holding to each other. But when the runaway animal was within a few feet of him, he saw the children.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL MACOMB REVIEWS 3000 MEN IN FIELD

Leilehua Plains Covered with Troops Whose Fitness as Soldiers Is Passed Upon by Commander of the 1st Hawaiian Brigade

BY LAURENCE REDINGTON
(Star-Bulletin Staff Correspondent with the 1st Hawaiian Brigade)
SCHOFIELD BARRACKS, Oct. 11.—Three thousand men, in full field equipment, passed in review before Brigadier-general M. M. Macomb, commanding the 1st Hawaiian Brigade, this morning, moving in perfect formation across the level, springy plain of Leilehua. The brigade commander, his staff, and the department inspector and his assistant viewed the long line of marching men, swinging by the reviewing point in company front, the band of each regiment playing. Then, when the last company of the last regiment had passed, the brigade was drawn up for inspection, and General Macomb went through the lines of his command, passing from company to company, and carefully noting the fitness of his men to take the field.

Shelter tents were pitched for the inspection, and as each battalion was looked over, the men struck their "pups" and marched back to the maneuver camp near Castner. The wagon train of the battalion, 19 wagons for a regiment, was inspected first, and the two-mule teams trundled off to camp before the foot soldiers came under the official eye. Owing to the shortage of animals, the army wagons are now pulled by single teams, and the crack of the long lash is missing from the military music of the outfit.

This is the first time that all three regiments of the brigade have been together, but for the next three weeks the men of the 1st, 2nd, and 25th regiments of infantry will have plenty of opportunities to get acquainted. For ten days or more they will be in maneuver camp at Schofield, and

VOLTURNO LOST IN MID-ATLANTIC RESCUERS HELPLESS IN STORM

Ten Liners Stand by Flaming Vessel, Gale Smashing Life-boats—Tragedy Happened Last Thursday Night—Meager Details Reach Wales of Disaster Sensational as That of the Titanic

(Associated Press Cable)
FISHGUARD, Wales, Oct. 11.—A story of disaster at sea as shocking as that of the lost Titanic and in some respects more sensational, was told to the world today when wireless messages from transatlantic liners this morning carried the news of a fire in mid-ocean that has destroyed the liner Volturno and brought death to 136 passengers.

The latest figures give 136 lost and 521 saved. This probably includes officers and crew as well as passengers. No tragedy of the sea surpasses that of the Volturno in its details of desperate battle against fire, wind and wave, of the cruel death of nearly a fourth of those aboard, and of the final rescue of the remainder, accomplished yesterday morning by ten ocean liners under appallingly dangerous conditions. And as in the Titanic disaster, it was the "S. O. S." wireless call, speeding out from the stricken vessel, that brought assistance from half a score of steamers which abandoned their course and matched their swiftness against the swiftness with which the flames cut down the Volturno.

DETAILS ARE MEAGER

How the fire broke out on the Volturno has not yet been told in the comparatively meager details that reached Fishguard this morning. She was on her way from Rotterdam to New York crowded with immigrants. All that is known of the early part of the tragedy is that last Thursday evening the Cunard liner Carmania, on the run between New York, Boston and Liverpool, heard the frantic wireless call from the Volturno and answered.

The Carmania, a crack passenger-steamer of 20,000 tons, was then at latitude 48 degrees 25 minutes north and longitude 34 degrees 33 minutes west. Her wireless operator caught the "S. O. S." flung far over the sea in the hope of reaching some vessel nearby.

"ON FIRE!"

"On fire!" signaled the wireless from the Volturno, and her operator flashed the information that she was 78 miles distant, out of the Carmania's course.

Then began the race with death. The speedy Carmania turned and went at top speed to the Volturno, making 20 knots an hour in the teeth of a terrific gale and through heavy seas.

When the Carmania reached the stricken Volturno, the forequarters of the latter vessel were afire, the flames, whipped by the wind, already consuming the forepart of the vessel and eating steadily aft.

PASSENGERS HUDDLED AFT

The passengers, driven from the forward and below by the fire and smoke, were huddled aft, helpless, agonized, and almost hopeless. The crew and male passengers were making superhuman efforts to check the flames, but they met with little success.

Scores of men and women were crouched in prayer, and from time to time, with death in their faces, they rose to sing sacred songs as those aboard the Titanic had sung.

A flaming ship, tossed in the trough of the huge waves and already beginning to settle heavily as the water came through the opening seams, a little band of people in the last extremity was the sight that met the Carmania as the big passenger liner drove down at top speed.

The Volturno's propellers were useless. They had been fouled by falling tackle, and it is believed that her engines had

(Special cable to the Nippon Jiji)
TOKIO, Japan, October 11.—Baron Makino, minister of foreign affairs, has made public his opinion regarding the Chinese embargo, saying that the Japanese government proposes to maintain the integrity of the Chinese Republic and to promote the welfare of the Far East. "All the powers are in favor of this policy of the Japanese," he says, "and therefore the government will ask no special assistance in carrying out these plans. The recent trouble at Nanking, China, between the federals and the revolutionists has been cleared up, and our government intends maintaining strict neutrality between these two factions.
